The presentation concluded with a discussion in response to the data by Mike Walbridge, Director of Curriculum and Instruction, addressing some of the ways the District would be responding to the disappointing test results and discussing the data in a statewide context.

Comments regarding the data raised by the Board included:

- Concerned about the level of proficiency - less than half of our students are proficient or advanced
- What do these results say about Tierred Intervention - if Tierred Intervention were succeeding, I would expect to see better results by now
- How are we going to be ready for Common Core?
- Give the teachers the professional help they need to bring them "up to speed"
- We need to educate the parents regarding Common Core
- Appreciated all the hard work compiling the data; however, it's time to look at what we've done and if it hasn't worked we need to get back to kind of school that kids want to be in and achieve

Superintendent McLaughlin noted that if we don't raise the bar, we won't expect the best and we will never achieve it, adding that "Common Core brings us new opportunities, not to do what we're doing, but to change and do something different."
